The fellow had broken a pane of glass in a basement window, and, reaching in, undid the clasps and raised the window. Going upstairs, he had unlocked and opaned the front door, as a means of escape in case of detection. He then proceeded to the third floor to the room occupied by Mr. Ingersoll, where he secured a watch and $10 in cash. Coming down to the second floor, he got into the Blodgets' sleeping apartment, and has taken some $30 in cash and several pieces of jeweiry when Mrs. Blodget was awakened.

Mr. Blodget thinks the thief stole several valuable papers, as he has been unable to find them since.

An accurate description of the thief has been furnished to the police.
